

Alex Cicelsky Intro

Ladies and Gentlemen it is my pleasure to introduce a leader in ecological innovation...

He is an accomplished professional, as a senior staff member and founder of the Center for Creative Ecology (CfCE) and a founder of Kibbutz Lotan - a liberal Jewish intentional community actively engaged with the Global Ecovillage Network (GEN)...

He is an educated individual, having studied international agriculture at Cornell University's school of Agriculture and Life Sciences and graduated from the Hebrew University Faculty of Agriculture, Food and Environment with a degree in Soil and Water Sciences and Environmental Quality in Agriculture. He is currently a PhD candidate, researching sustainable development of insulation for houses from natural fibers in the Energy Unit of the Faculty of Engineering of Ben Gurion University....

He is also a mentor for the next generation, as a joint developer of the CfCE's youth education, college course and professional training programs and a mentor for many of the CfCE's alumni...

Ladies and gentlemen please help me welcome Alex Cicelsky.