Ladies and gentlemen, it's now my privilege to introduce you to an influential leader in the management of water in Israel...

He is a tireless advocate for water conservation, who brings together professionals and policymakers across Israel, the Palestinian territories, and Jordan to cooperate in water conservation, desalination, wastewater treatment, and education...

He is a respected scholar in the field of ecology, who has edited two books and frequently presents on the topic of trans-boundary water management in the Middle East...

And he is a passionate relationship builder, who works across cultures to mitigate wastewater conflicts between Israelis and Palestinians and researches innovative water solution technologies for the people of Gaza.

Ladies and gentlemen, please welcome the director of the Center for Transboundary Water Management, Clive Lipchin!
